Juan Carlos Valle

City Council Ward 2

Juan Carlos and family

"Valle shares many of Taylor's liberal opinions, but would be far more willing than she has been to work with others to translate his views into policies, to build coalitions, and to look for the kernel of truth that may lie at the heart of opposing ideas...

Ward 2 voters should elect Juan Carlos Valle." —The Register Guard, Oct. 7, 2012

Juan Carlos Valle is endorsed by community members who make a difference in people's lives every day.

GROUND GAME

THE ROAD TO NOVEMBER 6, 2012
BY NANCY WEBBER

IN DEEP WATER

Climate change issues cry for attention

When I rear-ended an SUV at the Hollywood on-ramp to I-95 on Thursday afternoon, I had no traction. Really. That's not an excuse. There were at least 4 inches of water — seawater — on the road. I-95 is 3 miles from the ocean, but there it was flooding up and out of the storm drains onto the freeway entrance. On streets from downtown Miami to Palm Beach, the water was more than 6 inches deep in some places.

Since the accident I've learned that during an extreme high tide, such as the one that occurred on Wednesday, the storm water pipes in Hollywood, and many other south Florida cities, can become submerged in seawater. It's the by-product of a changing sea level along Florida's south coast. In the past 70 years, since the storm drain system was constructed, the sea level has risen more than 8 inches and it is expected to rise another 9 to 24 inches in the next century.

The woman whose car I hit wasn't particularly interested in a conversation about climate change or gravity, but at least several newspaper editors and environmental groups want the presidential candidates to talk about it. The Union of Concerned Scientists and others were standing ankle deep at the corner of 10th and Alton in Miami Beach, while I was navigating the on ramp, pleading with the presidential candidates and debate moderator, Bob Shieffer, to talk about the dilemma. More the 120 scientists and local government officials have signed a letter to the candidates urging the topic to be included in the final debate in Boca Raton this week. By the time you read this, we'll know if their pleas were heard.

Storm drains are only the most visual indication of the subterranean crisis that faces south Florida. More than five million people live in the Miami metropolitan area on land that, at its highest elevation, is only 6 feet above sea level. The city of Miami estimates that its costs alone will be $206 million to combat the current sea levels.

The letter to the candidates says: "Because Florida is so densely populated, it is estimated 40 percent of the population and housing units at risk from sea level rise in the nation are here, in the state of Florida."

In March of this year, Yale and George Mason Universities released the results of a survey, The Political Benefits of Taking a Pro-Climate Stand in 2012. The researchers asked voters in swing states several questions: do they worry about climate change (55 percent of Democrats polled answered "yes," as did 46 percent of Independents and 33 percent of Republicans); would it influence their vote (57-49-44); should it be a priority (79-60-61), and should we invest in reducing it (73-63-49). When nearly 50 percent of the Republicans in swing states agree that solving a problem is worth a public investment, the problem is worth talking about.

For Gov. Romney, the challenge is to reverse course yet again. He mocked the president during the Republican convention for promising to address climate change and he has taken the Americans for Tax Reform pledge not to raise taxes at any time under any circumstances. ATR founder Grover Norquist has defended the pledge saying, "I don't want to abolish government. I simply want to reduce it to the size where I can drag it into the bathroom and drown it in the bathtub." Romney has to convince us that he understands that climate change is a significant concern and that it is worth spending federal dollars to address it.

For President Obama, he can get a little wonky and tell us what he's already done — increased fuel efficiency standards as a part of the auto bailout, cut carbon emissions across the energy sector, increased investments in clean energy and weatherization. But he also needs to passionately remind us of the Colorado fires last summer and the ongoing acceleration of the polar ice melt. Then he needs to look in the camera and, adapting a familiar phrase, he needs to say, so that everyone understands he means it, "I hear you, Florida, and if you give me another term, the whole world will hear you."

Oh, and he could put in a good word for me to a certain judge in Broward County. ■

THIS MODERN WORLD

by TOM TOMORROW

THE END IS NEAR

WILL COUNCIL ACT?

The Eugene City Council is slowly, painfully, somewhat incoherently inching its way toward considering the proposal by Opportunity Village Eugene (OVE) to set up a self-governed village for homeless people, somewhat modeled after successful villages in other cities.

Most of the council is trying to talk about OVE without ever mentioning its name, which is strange to watch. They clearly see this as a political hot potato and are running scared, afraid of some of their constituents who hate the homeless and don't want them in their neighborhoods — even though the homeless are already there.

As the American economy has steadily declined since the early 1970s, with working-class jobs automated or exported to Asia, classism has replaced racism as our country's dominant form of bigotry. The increasing number of people dropping off the economic edge threatens the right-wing view of how society works. It also scares people, consciously or not, as they realize they could be next. So they react with denial and blaming the victim.

It will be interesting to see if the council has the guts to act on OVE and actually do something about homelessness, or if, as in the 1960s civil rights movement, we will have to turn to the streets and the courts for a solution.

KINDNESS & RESPECT

I worked in court with Judge Alan Leiman for eight of my over 30 years as a Eugene Municipal Court employee. I also lost a loved one at the hands of a drunk driver. Judge Leiman was always fair and impartial and he believed that politics or social standing had no place in the courtroom. He treated everyone who worked at the court with kindness and respect.

Alan Leiman was a strong advocate for more consistent DUI sentencing and defendant accountability. He devoted countless hours outside of his law practice and work as a judge to reducing the number of impaired drivers on Lane County roads. As a 13-year volunteer Juvenile Court judge and as a past moderator of the Victim Impact Panel, Alan has demonstrated a true commitment to keeping our community safer. Please join me in writing in Alan Leiman for Position 7 of the Lane County Circuit Court.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

I am a retired teacher myself. I have lived in Eugene for about 10 years, formerly from New York City, continue to be a faithful member of the Democratic Party and consider myself a progressive. I have listened carefully to Juan Carlos Valle speak about his vision. While Betty Taylor has served Ward 2 well on some issues important to members of our Ward, what seems missing from her agenda is a vision for the future growth of our community. How wonderful it would be for Ward 2 to have a Latino man with a personal and quite compelling story of his own to represent us to help us move forward. It's time for a change and I believe Juan Carlos can move us forward.

Julie Beck
Eugene

NOT THE CHANGE WE NEED

From my prospective serving as the vice president of Southeast Neighbors and the Eugene Planning Commission, Betty Taylor is the right choice to for Ward 2. She understands our needs socially, economically and environmentally and she has proven this through her actions with her many years of service on council.

I have deep concerns about Mr. Juan Carlos Valle; take a look at who is funding his campaign. Donations are funneled through a PAC called Community Action Network. Some of the contributors are Delta Sand and Gravel, Seneca and a number of investment companies.

Valle has a fair amount of pro-development endorsements as well. One of Valle's political claims is he will protect the Eugene Amazon Headwaters but with this type of financial support I am not inclined to believe him. Some people are saying that Ward 2 needs an infusion of new energy, but Valle is not the change needed.

Taylor is backed by a long list of progressive-minded people and organizations. She will do what is right for Ward 2 and will keep the much-needed balance on our City Council. I have lived in Ward 2 for 30 years and have been involved in many issues that affect our neighborhood as well as our city. I know Taylor is the right choice for us. Join me in re-electing Betty Taylor.

RETURN RON DAVIS

I am pleased to see that Ron Davis is once again a candidate for the Emerald PUD Board. I have known Ron for many years, even before he was first elected to the board. I met him in connection with solar water heating efforts in the 1980s.

Ron has long worked to promote energy efficiency and investments in renewable energy. He was an energetic member of the early EPUD Board that oversaw the design and building of the path-breaking headquarters on Seavey Loop. I was a part of the design team for that building, and deeply appreciated the EPUD Board's involvement in the design process. The staff of EPUD participated as well, and this building continues to serve efficiently and beautifully, 24 years after its construction.

Through my long involvement with utilities, energy efficiency and renewable energy, I know that EPUD has an enviable reputation as a forward-looking public power provider. Davis knows this as well and is committed to its future as a successful example of how public power delivers reliably, saving ratepayer dollars rather than returning corporate profits.

I hope that Ron Davis is elected again to the EPUD Board.

*John S. Reynolds FAIA
Former EWEB commissioner

AN OBVIOUS CHOICE

I am writing in support of Katherine Schacht for re-election to the EPUD Board. As a Coburg area resident for almost 50 years, I have worked with many local political leaders, and one of the leaders who has always been willing to listen and support me has been Katherine Schacht.

As a friend and neighbor of Katherine's for over 30 years, I can vouch for her character, integrity and outstanding leadership. As a senior citizen on a fixed income I am grateful that Katherine has worked hard to keep utility rates low by controlling costs. Moreover, I have been fortunate to take advantage of EPUD conservation programs that Katherine has strongly supported over the years to help make my home energy efficient and further lower my bills.

Choose wisely this Nov. 6. I have two fliers sitting on my counter from EPUD candidates. One flier is a smear piece from a challenger who doesn't state one positive reason to vote for him and gives me absolutely no information about his experience, goals or vision for EPUD. The choice is obvious.

Keep EPUD one of the most efficient utility districts in the state. Vote for the only candidate who has a record of accomplishment for EPUD's rural customers and the only one who has a positive vision to maintain EPUD's commitment to reign in costs and provide even better service for years to come. Mark your ballot for Katherine Schacht for EPUD Board, District 4.

*Lurette Frost
Coburg*

ENABLING BAD BEHAVIOR

What line does President Obama need to cross before he is no longer worthy of endorsement [EW endorsements, 10/18]? He's already traveled further than even President Bush across the lines of murder, torture, terror, theft, oppression, fascism, treason and rape of the environment. You cannot "endorse" or vote for such a president and escape your personal moral obligation for enabling such acts. This is not an issue of moral relativism, like comparing venial sins. These evils are literally mortal.

Don't vote out of fear; vote your conscience and your values: Dr. Jill Stein, Green Party candidate for president.

*Pat Driscoll
Eugene*

A BETTER FUTURE

Ballot time is here and I'm hoping to vote to provide my grandkids with a better future. I know Betty Taylor will think of them when she votes, so that is an easy decision. I'll write in Alan Leiman's name for Lane County Circuit Judge because I know he worked hard for 20 years for kids at youth court. He gave them hope and directed them to a better path in life.

In the past I've worked for a fairer election system with campaign finance reform and I must support the effort by We The People's Eugene Ballot Measure 20-198 to end corporations having the same rights as people. It is a first step. And then, please no more money poured into casinos with Measures 82 and 83. If only we could reverse the past Measure 5 and have a progressive tax for schools and make education the number one priority for Oregon. Maybe next time.

*Ruth Duemler
Eugene*

LWV SAYS 'YES'

There are two critical Eugene issues on the Nov. 6 ballot: Bethel schools and Eugene street, bike and pedestrian projects. The League of Women Voters of Lane County strongly recommends an affirmative vote on both bond measures.

Measure 20-197 calls for using $43 million in general obligation bonds to fix approximately 74 miles of roads and fund various bicycle and pedestrian projects. The specific streets and projects are already named in a council resolution. Of the $8 million available annually, $516,000 would be used for the non-road activities. Bonds

Turning the Tide

Occupy Eugene (OE) celebrated its first anniversary Oct. 15 and began its second year of activism. This milestone offers an opportunity to look back to where Occupy has been, and forward to where the movement is going, as well as invite all of you to join in that journey.

The formation of Occupy Wall Street — and subsequently of OE — was a response to the poverty, homelessness, and turmoil that has resulted from the growing inequality between the decreasing number of “haves” and the increasing number of “have-nots” in the world. From the very start, the intent of Occupy was to redress the inequities in social and economic conditions brought about by a lack of effective regulation of financial institutions.

A good example of OE’s activism is the house it has occupied, literally, in downtown Eugene. The home in foreclosure was neglected, falling into disrepair and increasingly being vandalized before Occupy stepped in. This house symbolizes many of the major problems of our times: bank foreclosures, questionable lending practices, and an entire system that privileges big business and corporations over the needs of its citizens.

Perhaps this attitude of privileging the elite is best exemplified by the Supreme Court’s decision that corporations are “people.” An error in that decision is that people are human beings, living creatures who depend on each other for survival and happiness, while corporations are abstract entities with far different needs and objectives. One of the goals of OE is to continue to work on turning the tide, helping to guide our political and economic system to be more responsive to the real needs of real human beings.

In fundamental ways, the foreclosure dilemma is the result of another phenomenon of our times: the working poor, those people who are employed but not earning enough to put food on the table and a safe roof over their heads. The working poor often need to work two or three part-time jobs and are in constant danger of losing what they do have. The number of working poor is growing for several reasons. Wages are stagnant. Many corporations are cutting staff and either outsourcing jobs or employing workers part-time to avoid providing basic benefits such as health insurance. The working poor are often just an economic rung above the also increasing numbers of homeless, many of whom are veterans suffering the after-effects of our various wars and runaway youth who prefer the streets to unbearable living conditions at home.

We celebrate Oct. 15 as Day One of Occupy Eugene because that was the day that over 2,000 Eugeneans from all walks of life marched together in solidarity with Occupy Wall Street calling for accountability from our government and financial institutions. Since that day we have held many demonstrations, as well as Occupy protest sites.

We don’t limit ourselves to demonstrations. We strive to live by Gandhi’s injunction: Be the change you want to see. And in that spirit, we work toward the abolition of corporate personhood that corrupts our electoral process. We produce TV and radio shows that are broadcast locally, as well as podcasts to provide an alternative perspective of social, economic and political developments. On a more local level, we produce a bi-monthly newsletter, The Eugene Occupier, distributed around town. In addition, every Sunday from 1 to 5 pm, Occupy medical sets up its tent in the Park Blocks. The drop-in clinic does not stand alone; we also offer free haircuts, teeth cleaning and periodically tooth extractions in conjunction with St. Vincent de Paul. All of these services are provided free of charge.

None of this would be possible without community support. So we would like to thank everyone who at any time and for whatever reason has contributed to the movement by participating in events, in day-to-day committee work, joining us in demonstrations, contributing ideas, food, clothing, books, medical supplies, articles and poems for the newsletter, donating money, covering our events in the media, and the list goes on. Your support is the ground we stand on; the ground we occupy in body and spirit. ■ would be repaid from property taxes at a rate of $0.65 per $1,000 of assessed value, or about $127 per year for the average homeowner. The current bond measure, passed in 2008, has funded all of its proposed projects, but there are still many miles of rebuilding and maintenance needed.

Measure 20-209 seeks approval of $49.5 million in general obligation bonds to update educational materials, improve student safety and repair and construct facilities for Bethel School District. Two schools built in the 1950s would be replaced; funds would also provide safety upgrades, building repairs, updated textbooks and computers, and cost-efficient energy saving heating and ventilation improvements. The proposal maintains the current tax rate of $1.25 per $1,000 of assessed value.

Both measures provide for citizen oversight and annual audits of expenditures. Both will create infrastructure jobs as well as improving the local quality of life. The League urges a “yes” vote on local Measures 20-197 and 20-209.

Action co-chairs, LWV of Lane County

COAL BAD FOR TAX BASE

I just had the privilege of attending a Lane County Commissioners meeting that was held in Florence Oct. 16. The commissioners had published, in both print and radio media, that they would be coming to Florence for the express purpose of receiving public comment on the Port of Coos Bay’s proposal to bring large scale export of Montana Coal to various Asian markets. This proposal would include Lane County’s support for a “beefed up” heavy-duty industrial rail line that would accommodate this export, even though the coal would be transported through Lane County without the simultaneous provision of jobs for Lane County residents or the review of environmental and public safety concerns.

Amazingly, the chairman opened the meeting with (and this is a direct quote): “The Port of Coos Bay called me this morning and asked us to ‘pull’ their request for our resolution of support. Basically, they don’t have a project yet. Everyone jumped the gun on this.”

It is a well-known fact that property adjacent to industrial railways generates significantly reduced property tax revenues as the industrial impact increases over time. An enhanced heavy-duty industrial railroad steaming through Lane County will reduce property values and adversely impact our ability to deliver critical public safety. Are we prepared to absorb the further erosion of our property tax base that will inevitably accrue as a result of our support of this runaway railroad project?

OUR SICK CITY

If sending the flag from a homeless person’s father’s coffin to our landfill doesn’t break a conservative’s patriotic heart, what the hell will? [See letters, 10/11.]

Citizens with no place to go have to hide from cops. When found they lose their bedding, belongings and humble shelter with 30-degree nights. Our city has gotten to be sick and evil! A year of talking to the city about compassion and shelter was a waste of my time.

It is time now for lawsuits and more demonstrations. The city rules have provoked this, and will spend more for police overtime. I’m frustrated, angry, and heart-broken at the injustice we call “our” government.

AGENT OF REPRESSION

This past week we have seen a third young person from the Pacific Northwest sent to prison for refusing to provide federal grand jury testimony regarding activists in the region. Leah-Lynn Plante, Katherine Olejnik and Matthew Duran have all been imprisoned indefinitely for remaining silent.

It seems that it has become common practice to give immunity to people called before grand juries to force them to testify against others, frequently surrounding issues relating to political activity. It’s happened to animal rights groups, the environmental movement, and now the focus seems to be shifting towards the anarchist community.

When a legal tool such as the grand jury seems to frequently be twisted to become a tool of political repression, it’s time to rethink its purpose in our society. The U.S. is the only country in the world that still uses the grand jury system. It’s time to refuse to engage with it.

I admire the strength of activists like Leah, Katherine and Matthew who have taken a stand against grand juries, resulting in a huge limitation on their freedom. This is because they know that if we all resist grand juries like they have, eventually it will become a defunct agent of political repression.

EVERYBODY WINS

I am writing in response to the Sept. 26 article “Campers for County Park Security.” The Lane County Parks Division is doing something beneficial for the community. Using homeless people with RVs or campers as hosts for park security is a win-win solution for the Parks Division and for the hosts.

People with RVs are not legally allowed to sleep in their vehicle on the streets. Parks suffer from vandalism during the winter. The mere presence of a host will decrease crime while providing some homeless individuals a safe place to sleep in exchange for their much needed service.

I applaud Keith Heath of St. Vincent for running this program. He created an effective solution for helping homeless people versus the permanent Occupy camp proposed last fall. Occupy Eugene’s camp, which was a haven for the homeless, dealt with theft, fight and even a death from a heroin overdose. Why would anyone want to relive that? I am delighted that something proactive is going on in the community.

WAR ON WOMEN

Women will decide the next election, and if that scares you, we're not tasking for permission. The empowerment of girls is a global fight that manifested itself in a 14-year-old girl named Malala Yousufzai in Pakistan who was shot in the head by the Taliban because she's an activist for girls getting an education. In America there has been a 125 percent increase in crimes against women and children. Where's the outrage?

The war on women in America is a move to defund Planned Parenthood. Last night I drove by their new building in Glenwood and on the top floor was a room full of men and women taking a class. How can anyone who lives in this century be against men and women getting family planning and getting birth control? The world has over seven billion people. One party wants to reverse Roe v. Wade. One in three women have made the choice to end a pregnancy; we are your daughters, your nieces, your aunts, mothers and grandmothers. No matter how you feel about it, our government has no business taking a woman's choice away.

Women still make 76 cents on the dollar that men make. Where's the outrage? Baby boomer women started feminism; it's time to band together with younger women and evolved men.

Think about the little girl in a hospital bed with a hole in her head, all because someone doesn't want her to get an education. Women and girls must stand up against oppression.

BEYER FAVORS LIVELY

I read with great interest "GOP cash infusion heats House Race" by Saul Hubbard in the Sept. 29 issue of the R-G. I live in this area, which is presently well-served by Rep. Terry Beyer, who has been a strong supporter of education, including LCC, and of programs that benefit seniors and the disabled. She has chosen not to run for another term and has endorsed John Lively to replace her as our representative in Salem.

Lively has served on the Springfield City Council and as the mayor of Springfield and a number of other posts. (Visit JohnLively.com for a list of his work for the benefit of Springfield.)

Recently there have been a number of criticisms of the Pishioneri campaign, and the R-G has published a letter to the editor from Betsy Schultz, his campaign manager, denying that the campaign has done anything unethical or illegal. I beg to differ since this campaign has used push polls which are designed to sound as if an objective poll is being conducted. In reality, the call is actually from his campaign and is basically an anti-Lively call. I consider this to be unethical. Also, recently someone destroyed my Lively campaign sign and placed some anti-Lively campaign material in my mailbox. The material was not mailed and did not have a mailing address. Not only is this unethical, but this is illegal, according to the U.S. Postal Department.

I would, as a former elected person who represented Springfield on the LCC Board, like to endorse John Lively in his bid to replace Rep. Beyer.

ILLEGAL TO RECORD?

I'm pretty sure it wasn't Lauren Regan's comment in "Busted" [Back to Campus, 10/4] that "you are probably being audio-recorded" when being questioned by the police, but probably just misinformation from your writer. I was under the impression that Oregon law (ORS 165.540) makes it illegal for any person (including the police) to "obtain or attempt to obtain the whole or any part of a conversation by means of any device, contrivance, machine or apparatus, whether electrical, mechanical, manual or otherwise, if not all participants in the conversation are specifically informed that their conversation is being obtained." Please ask Regan for clarification.

*John Tietjen
Corvallis*

EDITOR'S NOTE: We checked our (legal!) recording of the conversation, and that is an accurate quote. It gets complicated in this age of ubiquitous smart phones and pocket recorders. Court cases often examine whether the person being recorded has an "expectation of privacy" and whether clandestine recordings are permitted as evidence in court. Recent cases have favored citizens' rights to record police activities in public places.

TIME FOR TEACHERS

I applaud EW for deciding to dedicate a column to education in Eugene [10/18]. I also appreciate Anne Bridgman for giving voice to educators whose voices have been drowned out by shrill voices of public education enemies and supporters of corporate education "deform" movement. It's time for teachers to tell their stories to the community in their own voice and I hope that this column can be shared with any educator willing to speak up. As a public school teacher for over 33 years in 4J (classroom teacher and now a substitute) I have witnessed huge changes in our schools. It's important to document those changes for all to see.

I also hope that we can put 4J experience into a larger national context. Our experience is very similar to other communities in Oregon and beyond. Public education, the foundation of our democracy, is systematically being defunded and supporters of privatization are creating a two-tiered system of education, one for the haves and another for the have-nots.

Educators here and all over the country are under attack, blamed for everything that is wrong in the underfunded schools. They are accused of selfishness for bargaining health care benefits, pensions, decent pay and working conditions. Unions are accused of sheltering poor teachers and standing in the way of reform. The fact is that teachers and their organizations are the strongest advocates for children and public education.

It's time to hear from teachers and all the people who work with our children every day.

HOBOS AMONG US

In your Oct. 4 News Briefs, entomologist Melissa Scherr ("No Worries About Giant Brown Spiders") is quoted as saying, "No hobo spiders have been documented in Oregon south of Corvallis."

I'm not sure if she limits that claim to this year, but during 2004 and '05, I removed over 20 of them from my house, which is in Eugene. I took several to the Lane County Extension Service for positive ID and they were identified as hobos. Upon request of a staff member, I later brought in a live one. Nobody there seemed surprised that they came from south of Corvallis or commented on their rarity. I don't know what records they have at the Extension Service, but there were and probably still are hobo spiders in Eugene.

THE LAST STRAW

Coal trains through Lane County are emblematic of the nation's decline. Sen. Bernie Sanders told us that 55,000 manufacturing plants have closed in the last decade, transferring jobs, machinery and skills offshore. Only to benefit the 1 percent. Then, next level jobs went offshore: call centers, service facilities, financial services, research centers and many other large volume employers. Some corporate headquarters even left us.

Now we scrape the bottom of the barrel to export basic raw materials. We export our forests as logs, chips, pulp and even biomass. There is clamor to export very damaging fractured natural gas. The most destructive coal mining ever conceived now plans to export for short-term profits. It is ironic that the largest number of containers returning across the Pacific are filled with baled paper waste.

Third-world nations are forced to export their raw material. Is this to be our destiny as well? And what does nature tell us? It is finite. Please don't consume it, laying it to waste in a mad search for profit.

A much wiser course for our nation would be to apportion our raw materials, over a very long time frame. Don't future generations of U.S. citizens deserve their share? Why not 1,000 years? Many resource scientists believe that hydrocarbons should no longer be burned, but used for manufactured products that last a very long time. Hydrocarbon molecules should be reused and recycled, some almost indefinitely. Energy currently derived from the sun, in all its many forms, must be our nation's and the earth's future.

So let's not just worry about coal train routing, but the very concept of exporting it at all.

SMOKER'S HERO

The big bad government is at it again! First they banned smoking on airplanes, then our workplaces, and now they're coming for our socialist parks!

The liberal health police somehow think that we should keep toxic cigarette smoke out of the places where our families and children gather. Thankfully we have incredible conservative leaders like Commissioner Jay Bozievich, who possess that special kind of courage it takes to stand up for the right of smokers to contaminate Lane County's parks with toxic smoke. And who doesn't love those lovely cigarette butts strewn everywhere? Bravo Bozievich. Keep up the good work!

And with registered Democrats outnumbering registered Republicans nearly 2-1 in Lane County, we (particularly smokers and plunderers) should feel very fortunate to actually have a wonderful right-wing dream team in control of the Board of Commissioners. To all you Democrats who haven't been voting: Thank you very much!

A SCATTERING OF TOXINS

I am writing in response to the article by Camilla Mortensen on July 12. "Coal Battle Heating Up In Eugene" points out numerous reasons to oppose these environmental degrading coal hauling machines to pass through our treasured city of Eugene.

Many citizens of Eugene recognize the potential harm to Eugene's air and water quality. We should all be concerned about the likely damage to our beautiful parks and open spaces.

In addition to the harm the coal trains would levy on our community, people should also be concerned about the traffic issues that would be aggravated by these toxin-scattering machines. On one end of town we will have to navigate our way through the probable EmX expanded bus route and at another part of town waiting for the coal train to pass by.

As a current LCC student who plans on graduating soon, I understand the importance of producing jobs for Oregonians. I don't believe that creating 150 jobs in the North Bend/Coos Bay area is validation for allowing damage to the environment and the beautiful city of Eugene.

CAPSTONE LOSES 12TH AVE APPEAL

Capstone's student housing project not yet under construction at 13th and Olive has hit a legal snag, losing an Oct. 11 Land Use Board of Appeals (LUBA) ruling to neighborhood advocate Paul Conte on the city's vacation (termination of public right to use the street) of West 12th Avenue between Olive and Willamette.

The LUBA decision says that the city committed a procedural error because it accepted Capstone's revised application for the vacation "without providing a reasonable opportunity for parties to submit responsive evidence," which violates the right of the public to give testimony regarding vacation decisions. Capstone had to revise the application after the public record was closed because an adjacent property owner wanted to retain public right of way to a portion of the alley adjacent to his business.

Conte says he's fighting decisions made around the Capstone project because the rushed process has unfairly tilted in favor of developers at the expense of the community. "It was also just one more example of the city manager directing staff to do whatever it takes to prevent any community involvement that might force Capstone to play by the rules if that would slow down the project," he says.

In addition to the 12th Avenue vacation appeal, Conte is appealing the Multiple-Unit Property Tax Exemption that City Council granted Capstone to the state Court of Appeals. He is also appealing before LUBA to challenge the traffic impact analysis that Capstone submitted due its lack of analysis on the impact on bikes and pedestrians.

Conte says, "Since the mayor and council seem to be encouraging the city manager to do Capstone's bidding, I'm resigned to hoping the courts and LUBA step in to protect the integrity of the local public processes, as LUBA did in this case."

FEE WAIVER FOR EXCLUSION ZONE RECORDS DENIED

With the next City Council decision on the downtown exclusion zone — which allows banning people from the downtown core prior to conviction of a crime — a year away, civil liberties activists already seeking the data they need to fight the zone. But on Oct. 17, Eugene Police Department records manager Joan Quaempts denied the Civil Liberties Defense Center (CLDC) request for a public records fee waiver for documents related to past exclusions, quoting a $2,284 fee for the records. EW was a party in the request.

Quaempts wrote in the decision that the fee waiver request was significantly different from an earlier request, when EPD granted a $22 waiver. "Whether the City Council should vote to extend the downtown exclusion zone was a matter of significant public interest; on Oct. 8 the City Council voted on the issue."

Occupy liaison Jean Stacey says the fact that the next vote is a year off doesn't make the data less of a public interest. "The public interest has not died, and it will not die until the [exclusion] zone has been eliminated. There is still a very deep public interest."

In addition, Quaempts wrote, "Prior to releasing the responsive records to you, the city must review all of the documents for confidential and exempt information and make any necessary redactions." Redacting Social Security reports and drivers licenses is necessary to comply with federal and state law. Quaempts also cited the need to redact confidential or exempt information in criminal background checks and number of contacts with the police.

Despite the need for redactions, Lauren Regan of the CLDC argues that because the records are of vital importance to the public, the fee is an unreasonable barrier to them. "It is unfortunate the city and EPD have attempted to stall and preclude the public from reviewing the facts and data regarding the highly controversial exclusion zone," Regan writes in an email to EW. "One is left wondering what they are trying to hide. Clearly these community groups have a right to inspect and review this public information, and charging excessive fees for public records with the hope of preventing public access to that information is unconscionable. We will appeal this decision with the goal of protecting the community's right to access public records."

Mayor Kitty Piercy says that she is awaiting an explanation of the situation from city attorney Glenn Klein. — Shannon Finnell

COAL VOTES CONTINUE — OR NOT

Oregon is facing the prospect of coal trains rumbling through the state bringing coal, and coal dust and increased diesel fumes, thanks to several proposals for coal export terminals along the coast and Columbia River. Gov. John Kitzhaber and Sen. Jeff Merkley have requested an extensive federal environmental review of the effects of exporting coal to Asia, having it burned there and blowing back to the Northwest. Local governments have attempted to weigh in on the coal issue as well.

The Board of Lane County Commissioners decided Oct. 17 that it would not vote on a controversial resolution to support the Coos Bay Bulk Terminal and its coal export proposal, "Project Mainstay," while the Eugene City Council voted Oct. 21 to oppose shipping coal through Eugene. The City Council's resolution supports the request for a comprehensive federal review, and it directs city attorneys to research if state and federal public health and safety laws could be used to prevent coal being transported through the city.

After the board decided not to vote on its coal resolution, which would have in effect supported the coal terminal, Commissioner Rob Handy proposed the board work on a resolution that, like the city's, would call for a review of the effects of coal. Handy says the original county resolution was "so heavily weighted to coal and the port that our other aspirations and values didn't get in."

Handy says that he wants more detail on the impacts to workers who handle coal up and down the line and the effects of mercury, lead and arsenic. He says the commissioners heard strongly from "folks all around the county" about their concerns over the effects of coal on air and on the waters of Oregon's rivers and territorial sea.

The commissioners heard public comment Oct. 16 and 17 in Florence and Eugene after originally scheduling to vote on the resolution Oct. 3 without asking for public input. Handy says the county's agenda committee, which includes board chair Sid Leiken and conservative vice chair Jay Bozievich, put together the agendas for board meetings. But he says he and fellow progressive Commissioner Pete Sorenson don't get information in advance and "are always asking questions about what's going on." Sorenson says that when the conservative majority took control of the board in 2010, they voted out a "good governance" ordinance that called for agendas to have detailed information.

The county's reasons for not getting the coal vote information out to the public include: reduced staffing, a sick staffer, a death in a staffer's family and that the county routinely votes on potentially controversial issues.

The board announced on Oct. 24 that starting Dec. 1, it will post agendas and materials a week in advance.

The board held off voting after Leiken said that he was told by the Port of Coos Bay that the "potential project" was "not moving forward at this time." When asked if the board's proposed vote in support of the resolution had been at the request of the port, Elise Hamner, spokesperson for the port, says she believes the county proposed its own resolution.

While the board voted 5-0 to look into Handy's resolution that would call for a comprehensive review of the environmental and health effects of coal exports in the Northwest, both Handy and Sorenson have doubts over whether the new resolution will make it to a vote. The resolution is to be sent to the county's Legislative Committee — the same committee that proposed the resolution in support of the port — for review and more work. Bozievich, who has said he feels that coal concerns have been “hyped,” is a member of the Legislative Committee along with county lobbyist Alex Cuyler. — Camilla Mortensen

SISTER HELEN PREJEAN IN OREGON

Catholic nun, death penalty foe and restorative justice advocate Sister Helen Prejean has returned to Oregon for the fifth time. While in Oregon she visited the Oregon State Penitentiary in Salem to teach a creative writing workshop through the Inside-Out Prison Exchange Program, which brings college and incarcerated students together in university courses held in correctional facilities, and visited the Coffee Creek Correctional Facility for women in Wilsonville. Sister Helen Prejean will speak on “Envisioning a Compassionate America” on Oct. 25 at the UO.

Restorative justice acknowledges that a wrong has been done when a crime is committed but aims to bring the community together instead of simply locking the perpetrator away. Prejean, who spoke with EW in 2010, says that part of restoring offenders is looking at their lives and what led to the transgression: factors like drugs, education or a dysfunctional family with abuse. Then she says those who are going to be released need to learn conflict resolution along with everyday skills such as budget management, how to have a job and how to relate to people so they can learn to be a contributing member of a community.

Johanna Luttrell, who accompanied Prejean on her visit to the penitentiary, says the UO is launching a new multidisciplinary program in restorative justice.

Prejean is perhaps best known for her Pulitzer Prize-nominated book, Dead Man Walking, about her experiences as spiritual advisor to death row inmates, which later went on to become a major motion picture. An opera based on Dead Man Walking will have its Northwest premiere at the Hult Center Eugene on March 15, 2013. Tickets go on sale Oct. 26.

Prejean's second book, The Death of Innocents: An Eye- witness Account of Wrongful Executions, tells the story of the nun accompanying two possibly innocent men to their executions. The book examines the death penalty system and how its flaws can lead to the execution of the innocent.

In Oregon, the death penalty has been on hold after Gov. John Kitzhaber said there would be no executions while he is governor. Death row inmate Gary Haugen has contested that reprieve, saying he wants to die. The Oregon Supreme Court will decide if a death row inmate can refuse the governor's reprieve.

Sister Helen Prejean's talk will be at 7 pm Thursday, Oct. 25, in the UO's Erb Memorial Union Ballroom; free. — Camilla Mortensen in addition to its original location in an old frat near campus at 790 E. 14th, also has a restaurant in Oakway Center. Owners are Lori and Paul Reader. The Rabbit, offering French cuisine, closed last spring with the promise of reopening later at a new location, but no word yet.

Falling Sky Brewing, which just opened in January, announced plans this week to double its brewing capacity. "Looks like we need to drill more taps," says Scott Sieber, lead brewer, citing "the insatiable IPA thirst." The brewery has purchased 18-barrel fermenters and a brite tank made by Metalcraft Fabrication in Portland. The brewpub and restaurant is at 1334 Oak Alley and is offering 25 cents off each pint whenever it's raining. Let it pour!

Ninkasi Brewing is also busy growing its capacity in its fourth expansion since the company formed in 2006. Groundbreaking was Oct. 18 at a building project at 135 Blair Blvd. Ninkasi is currently brewing about 95,000 barrels and year and expects to increase that to 295,000 barrels a year when the project is completed in late 2014.

through what they call the Food Cycles Bicycle Tour.

Tuula Rebhahn, who was an environmental studies major in college, and Hannah Cooper, who has worked with the Willamette Farm & Food Coalition, are planning on biking from Eugene to Boston, Mass., this December to promote sustainability and the importance of eating healthy and locally.

The 5,000-mile trek will take them predominately through the southern U.S. before migrating north into Massachusetts. Rebhahn and Cooper will work with the Willing Workers on Organic Farms program to visit and stay at farms along their route, with which they hope to have a significant impact in their quest to affect people who may be uninformed.

Rebhahn and Cooper are getting in touch with farmers markets, Rotary clubs, YMCAs, schools and churches, looking to talk to anyone who wants to hear what they have to say about living life in an environmentally friendly and healthy way.

"We want to take that message that we are living so well here, and change the rest of the country, and inspire people to do a little bit more to lower their impact and live healthier and be happier," Rebhahn says.

Cooper thought of the idea to bike across the country when she was 17, and she approached Rebhahn with it a year ago. If

FREE DENTAL CLINIC OCT. 26

A free dental clinic for extractions only is coming up Saturday, Oct. 26, for people who are uninsured, low income, have a tooth that needs to be removed, and have not had recent dental care. Patients need to have a phone number where they can be reached to confirm appointments.

The event is being organized by the Occupy Eugene Medical Clinic in cooperation with St. Vincent de Paul. Dentists can work on only one quadrant at a time so only one upper or lower jaw, left or right side, can be treated at this clinic. A limit of 20 people can be treated.

The clinic will be held at the St. Vincent de Paul's Service Station on Highway 99. The two check-in times are 8:30 and 10 am. Contact Adrienne at aes4@comcast.net or call 513-1739 to get on the list.

YVONNE YOUNG

"My mother always read to me," says storyteller Yvonne Young, a native of Grand Junction, Colo. "My dad, his dad and my uncle all told stories." Young studied elementary education at CU in Boulder, married a seminary student, moved to California, and taught for eight years at Hamilton Air Base. They moved north for his one-year post as campus pastor in Corvallis, where she gave birth to a daughter, Heather. Two years later, he left the family, and she went back to work. "I got a job at Willagillespie School in '74, the year that kindergarten started in Eugene," says Young, who began telling stories during 13 years at the school. "We had a storyteller for a week, and I heard kids listen like I'd never heard them listen." She took a year off for an interdisciplinary masters degree in storytelling, then returned to teaching, this time at Willakenzie School, for 10 more years, until 1997. She worked as artist-in-residence for the Lane Arts Council, and helped out with Bob Rubinstein's Multicultural Storytelling Festival throughout its 20-year history. "On Tuesday, I told stories at Meadowview School," she says. "Last Saturday, I told Turkish stories at the Haley Ford Museum in Salem." In November, Young will travel to Plum Village, the Buddhist retreat in France, founded by Thich Nhat Hanh, for a residency of up to six months, teaching ESL and storytelling to Vietnamese nuns.

ROBINSON LAWSUIT A PUBLICITY STUNT?

Congressman Peter DeFazio's campaign is calling a $1 million lawsuit filed by Tea Party challenger Art Robinson in Josephine County "meritless." The Robinson campaign also sent out an email to supporters that insinuates that Lane County engaged in voter fraud in the 2010 election, which Robinson lost to DeFazio.

Robinson's campaign did not respond to a request to confirm its allegations. It also did not send a copy of the suit to DeFazio's campaign before issuing its press release.

"Art Robinson has a longstanding pattern of filing or threatening lawsuits — most notably against Oregon State University's Linus Pauling Institute," says Liz Cooney, DeFazio's campaign manager. "While the campaign has yet to be served with the complaint, we stand ready to defend ourselves vigorously against its meritless claims," she says.

Robinson's lawsuit alleges that DeFazio's primary campaign strategy in 2010, and again in 2012, has been to falsely depict Robinson as a "pathological" "nut job," who lives and works in a "survivalist compound." The suit says Robinson is falsely depicted "as a candidate who has paid for billboards and other publications seeking to convey to voters of the district messages and beliefs that plaintiff [Robinson] does not espouse in his congressional candidacy."

DeFazio said to supporters watching the final presidential debate at Cozmic on Oct. 21, "He sued me for putting up billboards with his quotes on them."

Robinson, whose campaign has gotten a quarter of a million dollars from out-of-state hedge-fund millionaire Robert Mercer, is a climate change denier who has told EW he thinks that a little nuclear radiation can help keep the immune system in shape. The billboards feature photos of Robinson and quotes from emails, interviews and issues of the newsletter he edits, Access to Energy. The Robinson quotes include "OSU is a liberal socialist stronghold" and "Public schools should be abolished."

On the "voter fraud" issue the Robinson campaign wrote in an email to supporters that "The mail-in ballot system in Oregon has many opportunities for vote counting fraud. We studied this carefully during recounts of the 2010 election, and what we saw was very disturbing." The email, which originates from Art Robinson's son Noah, singles out Lane County for criticism and calls for volunteers to video and photograph "to watch for cheating."

The email says, "I shouldn't have to say this, but obviously we would not ask you to do anything illegal."

Lane County spokesperson Jenn Inman says, "The two areas the messages discuss specific to Lane County are vote count observation and ballot duplication. Lane County Elections adheres to all state elections regulations and guidelines, including those for observers and ballot duplication."

Robinson's email takes issue with the practice of duplicating ballots that may not be machine-readable to ensure the votes get counted. "Ballot duplication is not nefarious or an oddity," Inman says, "but part of the ballot inspection process and administered in Lane County in accordance to state elections procedures." Those procedures include duplicating and proofing done by at least two election personnel each with a different party affiliation.

Inman says, "Observer rules are intended to protect the integrity of the vote counting process including eliminating distractions, interference with or intimidation of vote counting staff," and she says observers are asked to leave phones and cameras outside.

From accusing OSU of retaliating against his son Matthew to Matthew filing to run against DeFazio in the Democratic primary, Robinson's campaign has had a history of publicity stunts. — Camilla Mortensen

- Find our condensed endorsements on page 15 in this issue, a 350-word version of last week's 3,500 words of analysis and recommendations. Our short picks are a handy way to compare our endorsements with those of the R-G, which were also compiled this week. We differ from the daily on the regulate pot measure, corporate kicker measure, the Circuit Court write-in, Court of Appeals, Eugene City Council Ward 2 and House District 7. The R-G tries to be "balanced" with an occasional conservative thrown into the mix (or occasional liberal thrown under the bus). We don't feel that need, particularly since the R's have been hijacked by the radical right.

- The daily didn't endorse in the three EPUD races and that lack of comment might be due to EPUD's political landscape which is an impenetrable fog bank these days. It's hard to discern the real issues amidst the personality clashes, the flying accusations and the conflicting information being circulated. The board meetings would make a lively TV reality show. Despite the drama, EPUD customers still love their home-grown utility and can look forward to a new general manager in January, and hopefully a better functioning board after the election.

The new board will need to look not only at EPUD's investments and strategy in energy management and conservation, but also issues of transparency and that tricky topic of board compensation. EPUD Board members get paid $134 for every meeting they attend, plus full medical benefits with zero co-pays. Board member Katherine Schacht tried to bring up the health insurance issue but her motion died for lack of a second. Oddly enough, we hear that motion is nowhere to be found in the board minutes.

- Is campaign spending overwhelming our treasured citizen initiative process in Oregon? That's our question after hearing the update of the Citizens' Initiative Review Oct. 19 at City Club of Eugene. Made permanent, but not funded, by the 2011 Legislature, the review is a good-faith effort using 24 randomly selected citizens to evaluate and clearly explain the actual effects of statewide ballot measures. This year, $85,000 was raised to evaluate only two measures, one the "Grange" casino proposal recently abandoned by its Canadian advocates. Meanwhile, massive out-of-state money pours in to mislead us on the measures. Not exactly what Oregonians intended in the early 1900s when they adopted the initiative.

- Our Best of Eugene Awards Show is at 7:30 pm this Friday, Oct. 26, at the McDonald Theatre downtown and everyone's invited to Eugene's answer to the Oscars. Doors open at 7. Advance tickets are $8 (available at EW offices at 1251 Lincoln) or $9 at the door. Proceeds will go to the "best nonprofit" category winner, as picked by our readers. Following the awards at around 9:30 will be party with music by Dreamdog, Sol Seed and Volifonix, our Next Big Thing 2012 winning band.

- From our jock drawer: Oregon Duck footballers are picked to beat the Colorado Buffs by 45 points Saturday at Autzen. Not much drama there, so we turn to other pressing questions. Will Chip Kelly be the next coach of the Dallas Cowboys? Will Kenjon Barner run far enough to become a bona fide Heisman contender? Will Oregon's defense outscore the Colorado offense? A good defense aims to stop the other team. A really good defense aims to stop the other team and force turnovers. Oregon's defense takes it one step further — aiming to stop the other team, force turnovers, and turn those turnovers into touchdowns. Watch for Oregon's defense to score a touchdown to help the Ducks beat the Buffs by 30.

- Get your fungus on! The Mushroom Festival at Mt. Pisgah Arboretum is one of our favorite local events and it's from 10 am to 5 pm Sunday. The rains came late this year, but we hear hundreds of varieties of mushrooms have been popping up on the Coast, in the Cascades and around the valley. The folks at Pisgah tell us the long dry season means some unique 'shrooms are expected this year. The savory wild mushroom soups might go quickly, but lots of other great foods will be available, along with live music, art and plant vendors. Our Slug Queen, of course, will be there. ERIN NOBLE IN PERU

BE NOBLE

Saving Eugene's Amazon Headwaters Keystone

In the hills of south Eugene sits 26 acres of land, called the Beverly property, that neighbors treasure for the trees, the wildlife and because the land is home to the headwaters of Amazon Creek. Deborah and Peter Noble say their son Erin, who died in a plane crash in Veneta near the Oregon Country Fair this summer, loved to hike from their house up to Spencer Butte, often following the trails through the Beverly property. Developers have tried repeatedly to turn the steep-sloped land into houses. Each application has been defeated, but the developers keep trying. The Nobles have started the Be Noble Foundation in order to save the Beverly property and turn it into a permanent part of Eugene's parks and open spaces.

Together with City Councilor Betty Taylor, Commissioner Pete Sorenson and Tsunami Books owner Scott Landfield, the Nobles announced the launching of the nonprofit Be Noble Foundation and its effort to raise $1 million to conserve the property, which they are now calling the Amazon Headwaters Keystone because, as Kevin Matthews of Southeast Neighbors said at the fundraising announcement on Oct. 23, "This is the keystone that if we conserve this property we can have a connection all the way through our watershed." The Amazon is connected to the Long Tom and then to the Willamette River from which many communities draw their drinking water.

'If we conserve this property we can have a connection all the way through our watershed.'

- KEVIN MATTHEWS, SOUTHEAST NEIGHBORS

Deborah Noble, Matthews, Taylor and others have been working for years to protect the Amazon keystone area from development. Noble says right before Erin died, they had a conversation about a meeting she and other advocates had with city staff and the Beverlys about the cost of buying the property.

Noble says that it would cost about $2.5 million to get the property to a state in which it could be developed, and selling the houses that would be built on it is projected to reap only about $3.5 million. Those numbers mean that Martin and Leslie Beverly would get only about $1 million for the developed property. Noble said the property's current market value is $800,000 on tax statements. Reportedly the Beverlys were offered $1 million for the property, but the couple thought the property was worth more. Public entities can only buy property at fair market value, Matthews said, where a private foundation can offer more money.

The Be Noble Foundation is looking to pay a fair price to a willing seller, Landfield said. He said Erin Noble was the youngest shareholder in Tsunami Books and an effort to save the land that Erin spent his life wandering is "a cause I can get behind." Landfield wants to raise $1 million to save the property.

Deborah Noble says that Erin told his father after the Country Fair was over he was going to jump in and help his mother with the effort to save the Amazon headwaters, but Erin died before the Fair began. isthat the property is reachable through walking, biking and even by bus. "It's a crucial area for wildlife," Taylor said, "a connective area." Taylor said while efforts have been made to restore the lower Amazon and the Long Tom River — the Country Fair has been active in that work — the water in the upper Amazon in the keystone area is already affected by development, herbicides and road building. More houses would increase the problems, Taylor said.

Matthews pointed out while both Taylor and her challenger for the Ward 2 City Council seat, Juan Carlos Valle, have voiced support for saving the Amazon headwaters, Taylor has championed the issue for years.

On Nov. 7, Erin Noble's birthday, there will be a celebration featuring music, drumming and more from 6 to 9 pm at the Noble's solar panel-powered warehouse for their West Wind Forest Products, 3445 W. 1st Ave. At 7:30 pm Saturday, Dec. 1, there will be a fundraiser for the Be Noble Foundation's Amazon Creek Headwaters Fund at Tsunami Books. ■

CITY COUNCIL RACE PITS TAYLOR AGAINST VALLE

by Shannon Finnell

When southeast Eugene voters mark their ballots in this election, they will make a familiar choice: four-term City Councilor Betty Taylor or an opponent? Taylor, a veteran progressive, is seeking her fifth term on the council, while Social Security Administration counselor Juan Carlos Valle is running in his first public election.

Taylor's supporters, such as Mayor Kitty Piercy, cite her devotion to Ward 2 and progressive causes as reasons to keep her on the council, and they point to the development interests donating record contributions to Valle's campaign as a sign of how much pro-sprawl, anti-conservation forces detest Taylor.

Valle's camp says that he's also progressive and would have a similar voting record to Taylor, and he's running because a "fresh approach" is needed on the council. They say Taylor doesn't compromise; Taylor says she doesn't compromise the values she was elected to represent.

Taylor's hair might be gray, but as her fellow Betty, Betty White, has shown, older age doesn't need to slow you down. (Betty White is three years older than Taylor.) Taylor's smart, sassy and votes for the kind of progressive values her south Eugene ward holds dear. Valle says it's all about compromise and collaboration. But when money coming into this campaign comes from conservatives, developers and timber interests, what do compromise and collaboration mean?

Ward 2 is having a rare November election because of a three-way split. Taylor got the most votes, but not more than 50 percent in the May primary between Taylor, Valle and Jim Ray. Council positions are nonpartisan and the top two from a May primary face off in November.

Lane County voters who followed the May primary County Board of Commissioners race might think this November race sounds familiar: A long-serving progressive facing a self-proclaimed progressive challenger who describes himself as more collaborative is exactly what happened when Commissioner Pete Sorenson fended off Andy Stahl.

No, Sorenson says — there's a big difference in the funding. "Betty's opponent has gotten a substantial amount of money from what I would call the dark side," he says, invoking Star Wars. "We're talking major Republican money." He says his May opponent was mostly funded by two donors, one of them Stahl's father.

Valle's campaign manager is former progressive councilor David Kelly, and his largest contributor ($4,238) is Kelly's wife, Jane Kelly, but other donors contributing to his campaign are far less progressive.

Development and real estate-related interests that have donated to Valle include the Eugene Association of Realtors, developer Dan Neal, Anslow & DeGeneault, Inc., Bennett Management Company (commercial and large-scale apartment management), Jean Tate of Windermere Real Estate and real estate consultant Hubert J. Prichard.

Timber executives Dan Giustina and Joe Gonyea III also contributed to Valle's campaign, as did the Community Action Network (CAN), a political action committee that supports conservative groups. CAN's funding sources include a long list of timber interests like the Giustinas, Delta Sand and Gravel, Seneca Jones, Oregon Family Farm Association PAC and Healthy Communities Initiative (which donated $22,643 to help defeat 2010's proposed local tax for Eugene 4J schools). The Oregon Family Farm Association PAC, in turn, has received $107,500 from conservative mega-donor Loren Parks in 2012 alone.

At press time, Valle's campaign had broken Eugene's record for campaign spending in a City Council race by spending $27,940.23.

"These are people substantially outside of Ward 2 who are trying to influence the election in Ward 2," Sorenson says.

Sorenson says it's not hard to see why conservatives and timber and development interests are donating to Valle. "They're upset with Betty Taylor for her advocacy for the environment, for her advocacy for the Amazon headwaters, for her advocacy for the protection of the urban growth boundary. They're upset with her on that basis, and Betty's opponent is taking money from them knowing full well what their agenda is. That's what I find distressing," he says.

But Taylor has been outspent by opponents each time she's run opposed: In 2004, Maurie Denner spent $21,699.79 trying to defeat her; in 2000 Mike Sherlock spent $21,860; in 1996 Anne Marie Levis spent a total of $15,263 in the May and November elections. Taylor spent $6,689, $10,940.77 and $6,615 in those races, respectively.

This time around, Taylor's funders include long-time Democratic politico Scott Bartlett (donating the most at $2,150), attorney and EW part-owner Art Johnson, and timber company owner Deborah Noble, known for her support of pro-environmental causes and saving the Amazon headwaters.

In addition to Sorenson and Bartlett, Taylor boasts the endorsements of Mayor Kitty Piercy, Councilors George Brown and Alan Zelenka, The Oregon League of Conservation Voters, Sierra Club, AFSCME, former county commissioner Jerry Rust, Greater Eugene Area Riders and former congressman Jim Weaver, a rural Eugene resident who called her "the most valuable member of the City Council."

Valle's endorsers include former 4J Superintendent George Russell, State Rep. Terry Beyer, former Greenhill Humane Society President Mary Walston, NAACP Eugene-Springfield Southern Oregon Chapter President Henry Luvert and four of 11 other police commissioners.

Quit or Collaborate?

Valle's citizen record includes serving on the Eugene Police Commission since November 2007 and 14 months as its chair. But he stepped down as chair in July amidst rumors that members planned a motion to vote him out of the chairmanship; Valle says he left the chairmanship to spend more time on his campaign. While some fellow commissioners have criticized his leadership, others have endorsed him or written letters of support.

In April 2011, Valle resigned from the Lane Regional Air Protection Agency (LRAPA) Budget Committee mid-affects the air those children breath is spent. The Budget Committee includes the LRAPA Board of Directors plus nine board-appointed citizens, including members representing large industry and agriculture.

In months since the May primary election, the council has voted to approve the West 11th EmX extension, and some have criticized Taylor for not endorsing the extension until after Valle did. Taylor says that the vote was one of the most difficult of her four terms on the council, and she needed the time to consider all of the data and constituent viewpoints.

"I've listened to everybody for a nauseatingly long time," Taylor says. She says she met with Eugeneans in favor of and opposed to the EmX extension, and she toured areas slated for denser housing with the director of LTD to better understand why the route would become vital in the future.

Taylor cites the repair, connectivity and classification of Crest Drive (a major part of Ward 2) and other area streets as another tough vote. "I lost sleep over Crest Drive," she says.

Sorenson says that as a Ward 2 resident, Taylor's vote against designating the streets as higher-traffic "collectors" is part of the reason he's a Taylor supporter and endorser. "It's a great example of where she took a very difficult issue of how we're going to fix these roads, and how we're going to do it fairly and how we're going to do it with community sensitivities in mind, and she actually brought this project to completion," he says. "That's just a local example, in my opinion, of her leadership."

Taylor's record also paints a resolute but open-minded picture. She's spoken for and against the EmX in different situations. While she says she doesn't approve of urban renewal "in a lot of ways," she was instrumental in using urban renewal funds for the construction of the downtown branch of the Eugene Public Library. She voted for an early property tax exemption to bring dense housing downtown but drew the line at doing so repeatedly.

Former councilor and Valle supporter David Kelly, who served on City Council with Taylor for eight years, has helped keep "collaboration" a key part of Valle's

"might have voted no." But he says that he would have voted for the modified extension.

Bartlett, Taylor's biggest donor, says he thinks a "whole cadre of special interests," like real estate and timber, are backing Valle because they want to get rid of the 4-4 progressive-conservative balance on the council (the same voting lines as seen in this October's exclusion zone vote). "My basic position," he says, "is that we can't afford to lose her."

Taylor and Valle indicated they might vote differently on the future of Eugene's City Hall. Taylor says she thinks the skeleton of the existing structure should be saved and rebuilt (see wkly.ws/1a9), while Valle says he's undecided and still open to the possibility of using the EWEB building.

Valle also says that while he doesn't want high-rise buildings on the riverfront, he sees the riverfront as a place for small enterprise and public access. He calls it an "opportunity to have careful development."

"I think that all that riverfront should be saved as green space," Taylor says.

The candidates both support Opportunity Village Eugene, the proposed village for homeless people. Valle suggests that the Lane County Fairgrounds might be a good site. Taylor was part of City Council's 7-1 vote Oct. 17 asking city staff to create a list of all possible sites by Oct. 31. With the fairgrounds located in the heart of several neighborhoods, that site is sure to be contentious.

Taylor says her other priorities for a fifth term include saving the Amazon headwaters from development, seeking funding for a youth center, not expanding the urban growth boundary and exerting pressure on the 4J School Board to keep neighborhood schools open. She supports free parking downtown and more bike paths.

Taylor says she's very comfortable in losing votes when she's spoken for her constituents and she doesn't agree with the majority position. She says liberals need to be more comfortable with disagreement. "The conservatives are determined; the semi-liberals are nice," she says.

Fifty Shades of Voting

Valle says that on civil rights and the environment, he sees his positions as "parallel" to Taylor's. Taylor laughs and says that her opponents usually end up with positions similar to hers by the end of the elections.

The opponents each have fascinating life stories. Valle, once homeless, now has a college degree, and the former undocumented worker is a U.S. citizen active in Centro LatinoAmericano (and is a former president) and still a member of the Eugene Police Commission, despite resigning as its chair.

Taylor organized civil liberties forums during the McCarthy era and began her environmental activism in the 1960s. After years of teaching high school English, she returned to the UO to earn an English Ph.D., graduating in 1986. She went on to chair the NLC Human Development Steering Committee after cities throughout Oregon campaigned for her election to the NLC board.

Either way, the demographics on the council are going to be ugly. If Valle wins, 51.1 percent-female Eugene will be represented by a council that's one-eighth female. (Claire Syrett is all but certain to win the Ward 7 seat.) If Taylor wins, the council will be entirely white and non-Hispanic, though Eugene is 7.8 percent Hispanic or Latino and 90.2 percent white. (Greg Evans, an LCC instructor and LTD Board chairman who is African American, is rumored to be under consideration for the Ward 6 position when Pat Farr is seated on the County Commission.)

Sorenson says that the big-money advantage is bigger in November elections. "This what happens to a progressive leader when the special interests believe she's vulnerable, and they've got a candidate who's willing to take that kind of big money and go into the heart of south Eugene and try to take out a strong, progressive leader," he says. "Yes, it does worry me." ■

— COMMISSIONER PETE SORENSON

way through his three-year term, after LRAPA board member Dave Ralston made xenophobic and offensive comments about Centro LatinoAmericano, where Valle was then board president. "I cannot see myself collaborating or even being at the same table as your colleague knowing that human dignity and respect for fellow immigrants and all people of Latino descent is under attack," Valle wrote to the LRAPA board chair.

Asked if he would resign should a Eugene City Councilor make similarly abusive and insulting remarks, Valle says he would not. He was not representing a lot of people on the LRAPA budget committee, he says, and he would be as a city councilor.

But Centro LatinoAmericano is arguably Eugene's most important advocacy organization for the rights and well-being of Latinos, and Centro and Beyond Toxics report that schoolchildren in west Eugene, which is 13 percent Latino, breathe in about 72 pounds of air toxics a year.

Critics argue that Valle stepped away from a specific opportunity to influence how the money that campaign, writing in a letter to the R-G that Taylor is "unable to work collaboratively." But others disagree. In an endorsement, National League of Cities (NLC) Center on Federal Relations Program Director Neil Bomberg writes, "She guided the members through difficult policy discussions on controversial issues like Social Security and Medicare by creating an atmosphere that welcomed disagreement and discussion, but ultimately resulted in consensus. Her knowledge of the subject matter, coupled with her strong commitment to the issues, helped make her year as chair of the committee one of the most productive in the history of NLC."

Taking Positions

The downtown exclusion zone, which allows people to be banned from the downtown core prior to conviction of a crime, is due for yet another vote in 2013. Taylor has consistently voted against the zone. Valle says that without the October compromise cutting the number of exclusion-eligible offenses, he

The history of Halloween is a long one. Scholars maintain that it began with pagan celebrations of the dead some time ago — and the first traceable usage of the word "Halloween" comes from 16th-century Scotland. But at the end of the day, this spooky holiday has become far less sinister than its roots, which suggest that the boundary between the living and the dead is at its weakest on Hallows Eve. Nowadays Oct. 31 is an evening of awesomeness characterized by jack-o'-lanterns, costumes, haunted house parties and — the obvious crowning jewel of the evening — candy. Trick or treat responsibly, and if you get home on Wednesday night to find your pumpkins smashed and toilet paper dangling from your roof, don't worry; it probably wasn't ghosts. Probably.

Halloween is on Wednesday, Oct. 31. Ouja Boards not included.

Employment First — Success begins with you!

Meet Mike. He works at Eugene's new bakery, "Not Just Breads," on River Road. The bakery owner hired him and other clients of Oregon Supported Living Program with the intention of employing and paying them just as he would any employee without developmental disabilities. Mike's attention to detail, dependability and creativity has surpassed the bakery owner's expectations and already earned him a promotion and his own business cards. He loves learning new skills like cake decorating and cookie baking, and supervising "Ginger," the dragon bread oven. Mike's story is just one example of many people waiting to help you improve your business. Who can we refer to you?

For more information: Kim Mitch, Oregon Supported Living Program, 541-343-4196

Employment First is a statewide initiative to help create opportunities for adults with developmental disabilities to secure appropriate and meaningful employment.

Funded by a grant from the Oregon Department of Human Services, Developmental Disabilities Services

The founders of Eugene Contemporary Art (ECA) want the city of Eugene to embrace challenging art. "Difficult art is what everyone remembers from history," ECA Executive Director Courtney Stubbart told the audience at the packed Red House Oct. 19 during the "Creative Conversations: Re-imagining Eugene — What the Arts Do for Downtown" panel discussion. "The commercial arts scene has always been a limp, sad creature. Difficult art is what Eugene needs."

ECA, an arts nonprofit, began as a lean startup in the spring of 2012 featuring a local contemporary arts calendar. It quickly evolved into a platform for contemporary arts education and community engagement, adding an artist residency component, known as Public Process, earlier this fall. Stubbart partnered with photographer and wife Kari Stubbart (ECA Communications Coordinator) and Courtney Stubbart's mentor, painter and teacher, Wesley Hurd (ECA Director of Education), to connect arts culture on campus with arts culture in the city.

"The gap that we are really trying to fill is one of education and cultural relevancy and building that conversation between serious art majors and the general public," Kari Stubbart says.

"We want to be part of a positive kind of energy and solution towards the lack of understanding of contemporary art," Courtney Stubbart says.

One of the ways ECA is bridging the town-and-gown divide is through a new four-to-six week residency program. ECA's first artist-in-residence, Alida Bevirt, became acquainted with the nonprofit through Hurd's first arts lecture "What is Art?" at ECA's gallery space, The Wave in the Whit. The recent UO graduate then scanned ECA's website and saw that they were accepting applications for a residency. Bevirt applied, was accepted and six weeks after receiving the keys to the The Wave studio and gallery space, she hosted the opening reception for her show "Soft Language" Oct. 20. The show will run through Nov. 15, when Bevirt will host a panel discussion with an artist Q&A to follow.

"It seemed like a really good time to jump in and beat the crowd, while they were sort of unknown," she says. Bevirt says it's easy for arts students to feel lost when they graduate because they not only lose daily interaction with fellow artists but also their university studio space. "ECA is really trying to introduce something new to Eugene. Having this entire work environment tailored for you — it's a magnificent privilege to be given the key to use this fantastic space." ■

ECA is launching a Kickstarter campaign Nov. 1 to help with costs for the continuing residency program, for which they are now accepting applications. For more information, visit eugenecontemporaryart.com. To see more of Bevirt's work, visit these-made-things.tumblr.com.

BIG K.R.I.T.

HIP HOP GET DOWN IN C-TOWN

Corvallis seems to be stepping up its live music game lately. As someone who grew up in Philomath — think Corvallis' Springfield — we got used to driving to Portland or Eugene to see anyone touring nationally. But now the Majestic Theatre has shifted some focus to live music: the Whiteside Theatre hosted the Cherry Poppin' Daddies last month and on Oct. 26, Dagger Entertainment presents (take a deep breath) Fright Night featuring Big K.R.I.T., Blue Scholars, Timeflies, 9th Wonder and Rapsody. That's more hip hop in one night than C-town usually gets all year.

Headlining the night is southern rapper Big K.R.I.T. (standing for Kings Remembered in Time). K.R.I.T., who came on the scene with rappers like Curren$y, Yelawolf and Wiz Khalifa, hails from Mississippi and rarely lets you forget it — loading his rhymes with allusions to the South, riding the post-crunk, proud-to-be-Southern wave that's dominated hip hop for about 10 years. And I can imagine a place (and I say this with affection, old-hometown), known to some as Cow-vallis, getting down to K.R.I.T.'s ode to rural livin' "Country Shit."

Eugene crowds, like music-lovers all over the Northwest, are no strangers to Blue Scholars' indie hip hop. The Seattle group eschews rap's usual subjects (fame, fortune, male genitalia) for social commentary and the Filipino and Hawaiian heritage of MC Geologic. Founding members got together while studying at University of Washington when, as described in "Bayan" from the album of the same name, "two students skipped a class, went and crafted an album."

Big K.R.I.T. and Blue Scholars perform with Timeflies, 9th Wonder and Rapsody 7 pm Friday, Oct. 26, at Benton County Fairgrounds, Corvallis; $35. Proceeds benefit the American Cancer Society. — William Kennedy

13TH YEAR OF DIABLOS HALLOWEEN

THE REBEL STILL YELLS

Billy Idol has long been one of the great symbols of '80s-era rock. So badass that he became a new breed of punk rock, so cool that he was rock 'n' roll through and through and even catchy enough that he could successfully wriggle his way into the pop world — he remains one of that decade's most prominent and enduring musical figures. Idol is so tied to that era that he had a role in The Wedding Singer as himself. How's that for recognition of stature in the '80s music canon?

You've probably been living under a rock the size of Texas if you've never heard of the British rocker, or at least heard one of his songs. "White Wedding" easily ranks among his most popular tracks to date, "Rebel Yell" is the sort of driving punk rock anthem people still bang their heads and raise their fists to today and, be honest, you love to shout along with Idol on "Mony Mony" regardless of whether anyone is watching or not. Hell, even lesser known tracks like his eponymous contribution to the 1994 film Speed still rock and stand as examples of his ability to comfortably cruise multiple genres.

Idol's image is just as noteworthy as his songs. The spiked, bleached blond hair. The leather jacket. The trademark sneer. In an age where Andre Agassi famously proclaimed in TV ads "image is everything," Idol demonstrated just how true this was, as he quickly became one of the most recognizable music celebrities in the world. And he still is. Maybe Idol should have been the one doing those commercials.

Need more proof he transcends stereotypical music genres and audience types? His show will be at the Hult Center. Chew on that one for a bit.

Billy Idol plays 8 pm Sunday, Oct. 28, at the Hult Center; $39-$69. — Brian Palmer

SONGS NEAR THE PICKET LINE

There may be no singer-songwriter with a beefier activist pedigree than Holly Near. Before she was 10, Near had performed for a Veterans of Foreign Wars talent competition and volunteered her vocals at the Taimage Mental Hospital. At 17, she was protesting military recruiters at her high school in Ukiah, Calif. In 1970, her cast of the Broadway production Hair held a silent vigil for the Kent State shootings and in 1972, Near worked as a receptionist for the Pentagon Papers trial. In protest of nuclear power, she led a women's delegation to Hiroshima, and in 1981, she became one of the first out lesbians to be interviewed by a mainstream magazine (People). More than 30 years later, the Noble Peace Prize-nominated Near still has much left to say.

Her recently released 29th album, Peace Becomes You, is a two-disc set with 28 songs featuring 22 musicians. This enjoyable yet jumbled behemoth of a record runs the gamut from Irving Berlin standards ("Let's Face the Music and Dance") to gospel-tinged collaborations ("There's a Meeting Here Tonight") to earthy originals.

On "One Good Song," Near — with a voice hovering between the likes of Joni Mitchell and Erin McKeown — laments the talking heads of talk radio (she's talking about you, Rush Limbaugh) and the title track is a tender serenade to a fellow activist ("The way you stand on a picket line for a living wage" is to Near as "The way you wear your hat" is to Frank Sinatra). One of her strongest moments on the album is "In the Shadow of War": a swinging piano tune that addresses torture and weapons of mass destruction, leaving listeners wanting to snap their fingers and march in protest simultaneously.

The album falls a little flat when Near veers away from originals. Although pleasant, nothing new is explored in "Sway" or "Dream A Little Dream of Me." And her take on Gnarles Barkley's "Crazy" feels out of place. It's clear that Near sings best when she sings what she knows, and when she does, she nails it.

Holly Near plays 8 pm Thursday, Oct. 25, at Unity of the Valley; $27 adv., $29 door. — Alex Notman

BILL CHARLAP

STURDY SONGBOOK

Elvis Costello, Brahms and Shakespeare lead up to Hallow's Eve.

When rock came along, it seemed to spell doom for the so-called Great American Songbook, those perennials composed by (mostly) New York-based songwriters from the 1920s through the mid 1950s. But those hardy tunes keep finding new life in various guises, and not just in cabaret or karaoke croon sessions. In Oregon, there's no better evidence for their robustness than The Shedd. On Saturday, Oct. 27, it brings back for the fourth appearance the great jazz pianist Bill Charlap. The son of a Broadway composer (Moose Charlap) and pre-rock pop singer (Sandy Stewart), Charlap has over the past 15 years managed to find new life in those old songs and others, and his impeccable, energetic performances demonstrate their lasting power.

Many of those classic tunes originated in stage musicals or films, and next Thursday and Sunday (Nov. 1 and 4), The Shedd features a sort of repurposing that brings many of the songs back to the place of their birth — the stage — but in a new context. Singer-actress Shirley Andress and stage director Richard Jessup take 18 songbook classics (by Harold Arlen, the Gershwins and also tunes from recent musicals and contemporary songwriters, like Elvis Costello and Burt Bacharach's "God Give Me Strength") to create a new, scripted, jukebox musical-style, one-woman show that traces a character's emotional journey from despair to hope.

You can hear classic stage music in close to its original context this Friday, Oct. 26, when Cascadia Concert Opera gives its final performance of Otto Nicolai's comic opera, The Merry Wives of Windsor, at LCC's Ragazzino Hall. But rather than a fully staged production, the company is presenting a concert version of Shakespeare's Falstaffian farce with piano accompaniment, a nine-member cast featuring singer-actors from around California and Oregon and an eight-member chorus. It's a treat to see this plucky, accomplished outfit expanding its reach from small venues to larger spaces.

I mentioned that Bill Charlap comes from a musical family, and in fact he's married to another fine jazz pianist (Renee Rosnes). On Sunday, Nov. 4, another accomplished musical couple appears in the University of Oregon's ChamberMusic@Beall series. Longtime Emerson Quartet cellist David Finckel and pianist Wu Han not only perform and record (11 CDs) together; they also direct the prestigious Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center and Music@Menlo festival. In their Beall Hall concert, they'll play an excellent program of sonatas by Beethoven (one of his finest chamber works), Debussy (ditto), Brahms and Shostakovich.

Speaking of intimate sounds, on Monday, Oct. 29, at Springfield's Wildish Theater, the excellent local players of Chamber Music Amici perform a classic, Brahms's breakthrough Piano Quartet No. 1, and a rarity worth hearing by one of his friends: Austrian composer Heinrich von Herzogenberg's String Trio No. 2, which bears distinct Brahmsian and Beethovenian influences.

Back at the UO, the season is in full swing with several recommended concerts. This Sunday, Oct. 28, the student Tardis Ensemble play 20th-century music that responds to poetic words and images by Copland, Barber, Britten and more at the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art. The same afternoon, the University Symphony's first program under conductor David M. Jacobs at Beall Hall includes a short work by the rising young Princeton composer Chris Rogerson (who's studied with composers from Aaron Kernis to Jennifer Higdon), Dvorak and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5. Also at Beall, you can hear a ton o' tubas on Oct. 31's OcTUBAfest, and a heap o' harpies on Nov. 3's Harp Day, including a concert featuring Corvallis composer-harpist Julia Kay Jamieson. There's new music by UO students on Nov. 6's free Oregon Composers Forum concert and on Nov. 7, the marvelously monikered New York-based Genghis Barbie, "the leading post post-feminist feminist all-female horn experience," plays arrangements of pop music from the '70s to today — sort of a Portland Cello Project for horny women.

Finally, on All Hallow's Eve (Oct. 31), try Mood Area 52's annual live performance of their original, tango-fueled live score (cello, accordion, guitar, bass, drums, cornet, toy piano) to F.W. Murnau's classic silent vampire flick Nosferatu at the Bijou Art Cinemas. It's always a neat trick, and a treat to boot. ■

BEAUTIFUL BEING AND NOTHINGNESS

Cirque du Soleil's Quidam explores darker themes

One of the biggest stars of Cirque du Soleil's Quidam cannot fold into a pretzel while dangling from a silken rope or pivot through hoops while defying gravity. The star is rather inflexible, actually. The Quidam cast and crew affectionately calls him "Télé," but in more formal circles, he is known as téléphérique. Télé is a 120-foot-long aluminum arch system, and he allows his fellow performers to take flight. "It's just stunning," says Quidam's Assistant Artistic Director Georgia Stephenson. "There are five arches and they stand from backstage all the way to the front of the stage where the audience is." So if you're in the audience this week, look up.

Quidam, Cirque du Soleil's ninth stage production, is one of the Canadian company's longest-running shows, punching in at 16 years, and perhaps its darkest. Trading the saturated oranges, fuchsias and emeralds of Saltimbanco or Koozâ for a more somber palette of grays and gas lamp greens with pops of red and yellow, Quidam exists in the imagination of Zoé, a teenage girl filled with existential ennui. Quidam (meaning a nameless passer-by in Cirque du Soleil tongue) is a world of whimsy where she can escape her indifferent parents, and the title character — a headless gentleman with an umbrella and bowler hat (think surrealist painter Rene Magritte's The Son of Man, except juggling) — represents "everyone and no one," or if you want to go further down the rabbit hole, being and nothingness.

"The thing that I find interesting is it is [Zoé's] imagination, however the characters are all very human," Stephenson says. "Humanity is a driving force in the story as opposed to fantasy or fantastical characters." The characters may be more quotidian than others in the Cirque du Soleil family, but they are certainly not lacking in humor. Target is literally a human target with a red bullseye painted on his chest (and an uncanny smile on his face), the Chiennes Blancs (translates to White Bitches — of the canine persuasion) are a faceless and voiceless chorus and then there's Boum-Boum (translates to Bang-Bang), a clownish version of The Dark Knight Rises' Bane, who proudly harasses the audience with his howls.

Zoé's story is told through soaring acrobatic acts like the Cloud Swing and Spanish Web and this is where le téléphérique shines, launching the performers as they soar above the stage and swoop down over the audience. C'est magnifique. ■

Quidam runs Oct. 25-28 at Matthew Knight Arena; $29.50-$92.

CIRCLE OF HECK

Young Writers Association's Scare-A-Thon hosts Portland author

Eugene will soon be graced with the presence of an author so clever, elaborate and terrifying that he has channeled his talents into writing some of the most interesting and “obstinately obscure” books you’ll ever read. Dale Basye, an author from Portland, will be a featured speaker at the Young Writers Association (YWA) Scare-A-Thon FUNdraiser on Saturday, Oct. 27. Basye will be reading excerpts from his Heck: Where the Bad Kids Go book series.

Reading Heck, you have to ask yourself: “Who exactly is this intended for?” Basye doesn’t sidestep the truth of his storyline, which is that two children, Milton and Marlo Fauster, have died and gone to the kid equivalent of hell. That might seem unsettling to the parents out there supervising reading for the tween-and-under set, but Heck isn’t the kind of book that will send kids into a frenzy of nightmares, rather it will encourage them to search out all of the allusions Basye interjects into his captivating storyline.

“It’s interesting when people ask me why I choose to write for children, and I have to say, I really don’t. I may tone down the off-color nature or innuendo-rich witticisms that often spring up naturally, but other than that, I write to amuse or engage me and don’t think too much about the reader. That may sound terrible, but I mean it in a good way: I don’t pander or assume I know what’s in the head of that wonderful young person on the other side of the page. I just naively hope that they enjoy the ride as much as I,” he says.

Like Dante’s Inferno, Heck has multiple circles, and each of Bayse’s books tells the story of that circle, starting with Limbo. The most recent book published is Snivel: Where the Whiny Kids Go. In each circle Marlo and Milton encounter an array of interesting historical figures who have been sentenced to an eternity in Heck where they act as teachers, torturers or in most cases, both. Just a few of the characters in the story include Edgar Allen Poe as “Vice Principal Poe,” Orpheus as “Mr. Orpheus, professor of Music Deprecation” and Van Gogh as “Mr. Van Gogh, Art Teacher.” The references are just another touch Basye added that only contributes to the detail in his series, “It helps me, when creating a story, grabbing a lot of arcane bits here and there so it seems real to me. Ideally, kids will be able to read my books and get one experience, while adults will be able to read them and get another.”

Whether you get his books for the kids in your life, or for yourself, Heck: Where the Bad Kids Go is an extremely intellectual, entertaining series that anyone can enjoy.

Dale Basye is speaking at the YWA Scare-A-Thon FUNdraiser, 11 am to 2 pm Saturday, Oct. 27, at Barnes & Noble; free. ■

Don't let Hennery's calm and quiet demeanor fool you, he's all terrier! Little Lieutenant Frizzfur is on the case and ready to investigate. Whether it's the nose or the curiosity that propels this diminutive dog into every crack, crevice and corner for a thorough sniff, we can't be sure. But, it's clear that this 3 year old is looking to root out a happy home with a house full of sniffastic opportunities. Meet Hennery and all of our canine companions at 1st Avenue Shelter. Don't forget, kittens are still two for the price of one and on Supurr Saturdays, adoption fees for all felines are reduced!

ected to sell the said real property to satisfy the obligations secured by said trust deed and a notice of default has been recorded pursuant to Oregon Revised Statutes 86.735(3). The default for which foreclosure is made is Grantor's failure to pay when due the following sums: The monthly installment payments of $655.00 beginning March 25, 2012 and continuing through the installment due June 25, 2012; plus interest and late charges; real property taxes, plus interest and penalties; and other liens and penalties. Total default as of June 25, 2012 is $2,620.00. The sum owing on the obligation that the Trust Deed secures (the "Obligation") is: $90,428.00, together with the sum of $1,782.99, which represents unpaid contractual interest, fees and late charges through and including June 25, 2012, together with interest on the principal sum of $90,428.00 at the rate of 5.50% per annum from June 26, 2012 until paid, together with insurance paid by the Beneficiary on the property, late charges and penalties, trustee fees, attorney fees, foreclosure costs and any sums advanced by the Beneficiary pursuant to the trust deed. By reason of the default, the Beneficiary and the Trustee elect to sell the Property to satisfy the Obligation and to foreclose the Trust Deed by advertisement and sale pursuant to ORS 86.705 to 86.795. At public auction, the Trustee shall sell to the highest bidder for cash the interest in the Property which the Grantor had, or had the power to convey, at the time of the execution by Grantor of the Trust Deed, together with any interest Grantor or Grantor's successors in interest acquired after the execution of the Trust Deed, to satisfy the Obligation. THE DATE, TIME AND PLACE OF THE SALE IS: DATE: JANUARY 3, 2013. THIS FRIDAY MCDONALD THEATRE

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): In the coming days, many of your important tasks will be best accomplished through caginess and craftiness. Are you willing to work behind the scenes and beneath the surface? I suspect you will have a knack for navigating your way skillfully and luckily through mazes and their metaphorical equivalents. The mists may very well part at your command, revealing clues that no one else but you can get access to. You might also have a talent for helping people to understand elusive or difficult truths. Halloween costume suggestions: spy, stage magician, ghost whisperer, exorcist.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The coming week could have resemblances to the holiday known as Opposite Day. Things people say may have meanings that are different or even contrary to what they supposedly mean. Qualities you usually regard as liabilities might temporarily serve as assets, and strengths could seem problematical or cause confusion. You should also be wary of the possibility that the advice you get from people you trust may be misleading. For best results, make liberal use of reverse psychology, freaky logic, and mirror magic. Halloween costume suggestion: the opposite of who you really are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): I don't have a big problem with your tendency to contradict yourself. I'm rarely among the consistency freaks who would prefer you to stick with just one of your many selves instead of hopscotching among all nine. In fact, I find your multi-level multiplicity interesting and often alluring. I take it as a sign that you are in alignment with the fundamentally paradoxical nature of life. Having said all that, however, I want to alert you to an opportunity that the universe is currently offering you, which is to feel unified, steady, and stable. Does that sound even vaguely enticing? Why not try it out for a few weeks? Halloween costume suggestion: an assemblage or collage of several of your different personas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An avocado tree may produce so much fruit that the sheer weight of its exuberant creation causes it to collapse. Don't be like that in the coming weeks, Cancerian. Without curbing your luxuriant mood, simply monitor your outpouring of fertility so that it generates just the right amount of beautiful blooms. Be vibrant and bountiful and fluidic, but not unconstrained or overwrought or recklessly lavish. Halloween costume suggestion: a bouquet, an apple tree, a rich artist, or an exotic dancer with a bowl of fruit on your head.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): I hope your father didn't beat you or scream at you or molest you. If he did, I am so sorry for your suffering. I also hope that your father didn't ignore you or withhold his best energy from you. I hope he didn't disappear for weeks at a time and act oblivious to your beauty. If he did those things, I mourn for your loss. Now it's quite possible that you were spared such mistreatment, Leo. Maybe your dad gave you conscientious care and loved you for who you really are. But whatever the case might be, this is the right time to acknowledge it. If you're one of the lucky ones, celebrate to the max. If you're one of the wounded ones, begin or renew your quest for serious and intensive healing. Halloween costume suggestion: your father.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do you know how to tell the difference between superstitious hunches and dependable intuitions? Are you good at distinguishing between mediocre gossip that's only ten percent accurate and reliable rumors that provide you with the real inside dope? I suspect that you will soon get abundant opportunities to test your skill in these tasks. To increase the likelihood of your success, ask yourself the following question on a regular basis: Is what you think you're seeing really there or is it mostly a projection of your expectations and theories? Halloween costume suggestions: a lie detector, an interrogator with syringes full of truth serum, a superhero with X-ray vision, a lab scientist.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): I am officially protesting you, Libra. I am staging a walkout and mounting a demonstration and launching a boycott unless you agree to my demand. And yes, I have just one demand: that you take better care of the neglected, disempowered, and underprivileged parts of your life. Not a year from now; not when you have more leisure time; NOW! If and when you do this, I predict the arrival of a flood of personal inspiration. Halloween costume suggestion: a symbolic representation of a neglected, disempowered, or underprivileged part of your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "It's so fine and yet so terrible to stand in front of a blank canvas," said French painter Paul Cezanne. Many writers make similar comments about the excruciating joy they feel when first sitting down in front of an empty page. For artists in any genre, in fact, getting started may seem painfully impossible. And yet there can also be a delicious anticipation as the ripe chaos begins to coalesce into coherent images or words or music. Even if you're not an artist, Scorpio, you're facing a comparable challenge in your own chosen field. Halloween costume suggestion: a painter with a blank canvas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): As you contemplate what you want to be for Halloween, don't consider any of the following options: a thoroughbred racehorse wearing a blindfold; a mythic centaur clanking around in iron boots; a seahorse trying to dance on dry land. For that matter, Sagittarius, I hope you won't come close to imitating any of those hapless creatures even in your non-Halloween life. It's true that the coming days will be an excellent time to explore, analyze, and deal with your limitations. But that doesn't mean you should be overwhelmed and overcome by them. Halloween costume suggestions: Houdini, an escaped prisoner, a snake molting its skin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): "Does anyone know where I can find dinosaur costumes for cats?" asked a Halloween shopper on Reddit.com. In the comments section, someone else said that he needed a broccoli costume for his Chihuahua. I bring this up, Capricorn, because if anyone could uncover the answers to these questions, it would be you. You've got a magic touch when it comes to hunting down solutions to unprecedented problems. Halloween costume suggestion: a cat wearing a dinosaur costume.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The Live Monarch Foundation made a video on how to fix a butterfly's broken wing (tinyurl.com/FixWing). It ain't easy. You need 10 items, including tweezers, talcum powder, toothpicks and glue. You've got to be patient and summon high levels of concentration. But it definitely can be done. The same is true about the delicate healing project you've thought about attempting on your own wound, Aquarius. It will require you to be ingenious, precise, and tender, but I suspect you're primed to rise to the challenge. Halloween costume suggestion: herbalist, acupuncturist, doctor, shaman, or other healer.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It's not a good time to wear Super-Control Higher-Power Spanx, or any other girdle, corset, or restrictive garment. In fact, I advise you not to be a willing participant in any situation that pinches, hampers, or confines you. You need to feel exceptionally expansive. In order to thrive, you've got to give yourself permission to spill over, think big, and wander freely. As for those people who might prefer you to keep your unruly urges in check and your natural inclinations concealed: Tell them your astrologer authorized you to seize a massive dose of slack. Halloween costume suggestions: a wild man or wild woman; a mythical bird like the Garuda or Thunderbird; the god or goddess of abundance.

HOMEWORK: Exhausted by the ceaseless barrage of depressing stories you absorb from the news media? Here's an antidote: <http://PronoiaResources.com>.

SAVAGE LOVE

WORDS OF WISDOM BY DAN SAVAGE

What the hell do I say to my straight 14-year-old son about porn? Should I say anything? My sister tells me that all the research shows my son has been looking at porn for three years already. Am I too late?

Distressed Anxious Dad

According to the Today show and the Boston Globe and the American Family Association and most of what pops up when you google "kids and porn," DAD, you're three years late to this pants-shitting party. "The average age a child first views internet pornography is 11," Matt Lauer warned parents on Today seven years ago. "And those kids don't look away."

But the alarming statistic Lauer cited — which was used to justify all sorts of proposed crack-downs on online porn — turned out to be total bullshit. Way, way back in 2005, Seth Lubove, a writer for Forbes, traced the stat back to its source. The Today show got it from the Boston Globe, the Boston Globe got it from Family Safe Media, "a small firm in Provo, Utah, [which] is in the business of scaring parents into buying software to protect their kids from internet smut." Family Safe Media got it from Internet Filter Review, a website that markets content-blocking software. Internet Filter Review got it from The Drug of the New Millennium, a self-published book about the dangers of porn addiction. Lubove tracked down the self-published author, and guess what? He couldn't recall where he got that stat. Somewhere along the line, Third Way, "a Washington think tank that helps Democrats grab on to red-state issues," was seriously pimping the bogus stat to credulous conservative Dems.

Lubove reviewed actual research done by legit social scientists — a real study! A statistically significant population sample! A random-sample survey! — and reported that most kids don't start actively seeking out online porn until age 14.

So you're not too late, DAD.

Now, here's what I think you should tell your son about porn: There's a lot of it out there, some of it's pretty fucked up, and he can get in huge and potentially life-derailing trouble if he gets caught watching or downloading the wrong kind of porn, e.g., underage, kiddie, etc. You should tell your son that the sex in porn bears about as much resemblance to real-life sex as action movies bear to real-life life. And warn him that a lot of porn is made by and for guys who have no other sexual outlets, i.e., guys who have no wives, no girlfriends, and no hope. Many of these guys — many, not most, but many — are angry and resentful, and their anger and resentment is a poison that creeps into a lot of porn; sometimes the poison is obvious, sometimes it's not. If you put it in your straight son's head that the poisonously misogynist shit he'll see in some porn is there to appeal to angry losers who can't get laid, DAD, your son will be less likely to internalize it — because your son doesn't want to see himself as an angry loser, right?

Finally, DAD, if your son is watching porn, he's masturbating. Tell him to vary his routine: left hand, right hand, a little lube, a lot of lube, firm grip, loose grip. You don't want your son to ruin himself for partnered sex by using the "death grip" — a fist clenched tighter than any human throat or pussy can clench — during solo sex. And send him to www.makelovenotporn.com for a brisk, sex-positive porn-versus-reality check.

A while ago, I broke up with my long-term boyfriend. A few months after the breakup, I met someone new and we started sleeping together. It was the best sex of my life. Wild, passionate, and unpredictable. New Guy wasn't looking for anything serious, and neither was I, so we kept things very casual. After a couple months of amazing sex with New Guy, my long-term boyfriend came back into the picture. I told him I'd been seeing other people, but that I missed him and wanted to make things work between us. All good, right? Wrong! I love him so much, and I think we could have a very happy life together, but when we have sex, it just seems so dull and average compared to the volcanic sex that I was having during our time apart. Do I sacrifice an amazing sex life for a happy life of decidedly average sex with the man I love? Help!

Missing Amazing Sex

You're not going to be happy having safe, boring, predictable sex with Mr. Long Term for the long term, right? Not after all that wild, passionate, unpredictable sex with Mr. New Guy. So if things don't improve, your relationship with Mr. Long Term is doomed. So you have nothing to lose by slapping your cards down on the table, MAS.

Tell Mr. Long Term the truth: The sex has to get better. Now, maybe Mr. Long Term is the problem (he could be lousy at sex) or maybe it's the combo of you and Mr. Long Term that's the problem (maybe you two just don't click sexually), and the relationship is doomed no matter what you do. But there's a chance your problem is a relatively common hang-up, MAS. It's possible that you, or Mr. Long Term, or you and Mr. Long Term feel inhibited during sex because you're in love, and people who are in love are supposed to have sex one way (you're supposed to make safe, boring, predictable love). But people who aren't in love — people like you and Mr. New Guy — are free to have sex another way (they're allowed to have wild, passionate, and unpredictable fucks).

Give Mr. Long Term permission to fuck you like he's never going to see you again. You should fuck him the same way. Fuck each other like the stakes are low — fuck like it's casual, fuck like it could end at any time. The "lovmaking" inhibition can be literally fucked death, if it's indeed the problem here, and once you've fucked it good and dead, you'll see that you can have a happy life, a committed relationship, and wild, passionate, unpredictable sex — with the same person!

But you gotta want it bad enough to fuck for it.

I'm a straight woman in a monogamous, long-distance relationship with a straight man. Last weekend, I went out with my roommate (also a straight woman, also in a committed relationship). We went to a club, took some E, and did way too many tequila shots. We stumbled home and ended up fingerbanging each other in my bed. I have never had sexual feelings for my roommate, and she says she doesn't have them for me. Do I have to tell my boyfriend about this indiscretion? I know he would be confused and upset. It was a strange, one-time thing that I plan on never doing again.

Not A Lesbian I Think

If it was a one-time thing, if you learned your lesson, if you're sure it won't happen again, if you didn't contract anything, and if there are no fetuses gestating (which, barring a miracle, is not an issue for you), you don't need to disclose this indiscretion. Chalk it up to the E and the tequila, change your sheets, scrub under your fingernails, and spare your boyfriend the upsetting details.

Gay Republicans, Dan. Why? How?

Confused

Self-loathing, that's why. Homophobia, that's how.
